PREFACE

It gives me great pleasure in placing before the world of scholars the Second Volume of the Critical Edition of the Vālmiki-Rāmāyaṇa comprising the Ayodhyākāṇḍa edited by Dr. P. L. Vaidya, M.A. (Cal.), D.Litt. (Paris), the General Editor of the Mahābhārata. The Bālakāṇḍa was completed in 1960 and the first Fascicule of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa containing the first forty Sargas was published last year. It is gratifying to note that both of them were very favourably received by competent authorities in India and abroad. The reviews in the Press, both Indian and foreign, were also equally favourable.

The University Grants Commission, which was pleased to give an annual grant of Rs. 20,000 for four years, from 1955-59, and a liberal grant of Rs. 45,000 for the year 1959-60 to the Rāmāyaṇa Department, appointed an expert committee to evaluate the work done in the publication of the Critical Edition of the Vālmiki-Rāmāyaṇa and to examine and recommend how the scheme should be implemented in future. The committee consisted of the following members :—

1. Professor Suryakant, Banaras Hindu University.
2. Professor R. N. Dandekar, Poona University.
3. Dr. S. Bhattacharya, University Grants Commission.

The committee visited the M. S. University of Baroda on the 28th and the 29th June, 1960 and was satisfied with the work of the Rāmāyaṇa Department accomplished since the inception of the scheme by the University in March 1951. On their recommendation, the University Grants Commission was pleased to continue its assistance on the basis of the two-third of the expenditure on the Rāmāyaṇa Scheme from 1960-61 to 1966-67 on condition that the remaining one-third would be met by the University/State Government. The Government of Gujarat was also later on pleased to sanction the grant of the remaining one-third of the expenditure. We ever remain most grateful to the University Grants Commission and the Government of Gujarat for their liberal financial help.

The progress of the Rāmāyaṇa Department is quite satisfactory. The text of the Aranyakāṇḍa was constituted by Shri P. C. Divanji, M.A., LL.M.,—alas, he is now no more—and was thoroughly checked by the General Editor. The Critical Apparatus of the whole Aranyakāṇḍa is completed and is under revision. The Third Volume will be published in 1963. The text of the first twenty-five Sargas of the Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa has been constituted by Prof. D. R. Mankad, M.A., who will complete the work very shortly. The Critical Apparatus of the Kiṣkindhākāṇḍa is under preparation, and it is proposed to publish it as the Fourth Volume in 1964. The Sundarakāṇḍa, which will be soon taken up by Prof. G. C. Jhala, M.A., will be published in 1965. Dr. P. L. Vaidya will take up the Yuddhakāṇḍa and the General Editor will mind the last Kāṇḍa. It is proposed to finish the entire work in 1967.

I am most thankful to the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. J. M. Mehta, the Pro-Vice-Chancellor, Dr. C. S. Patel, and the Syndicate for the keen interest they have been taking in the Rāmāyaṇa work and for all the facilities given to the Rāmāyaṇa Department. I must also thank Shrimati Dr. Hansaben Mehta, the ex-Vice-Chancellor, for her continuous interest in the Critical Edition of the Rāmāyaṇa. I am again grateful to the members of the Board of Referees for their appreciative remarks. I also thank the Editor of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, Dr. P. L. Vaidya, for completing the work according to schedule in spite of his heavy responsibilities.

My thanks are again due to the Manager of the University Press, Shri Ramanlal J. Patel, for his usual promptness, vigilance, sincerity and interest in the Rāmāyaṇa, which have stood me in good stead in the publication of the Critical Edition. I also most sincerely thank the staff of the Rāmāyaṇa Department for their hearty co-operation. I am also thankful to the Director of the Oriental Institute, Dr. B. J. Sandesara, for his interest in the Rāmāyaṇa Department.

Once more I thank the University Grants Commission and the Government of Gujarat for their financial help.

INTRODUCTION

THIS Critical Edition of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa of Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa is based on 29 MSS., selected from out of 43 MSS. fully collated for this purpose. These MSS. are written in Śāradā or Kaśmīrī, Newārī or Nepālī, Maithilī, Bengali, Devanāgarī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayalam scripts. There are some MSS. in Nandināgarī and Uriyā scripts, but they hardly differ from Southern and Bengali versions respectively, and hence not utilized for the preparation of the Critical Apparatus. Some of these MSS. are dated while some do not record their dates, but all of them have been selected as best representatives of different scripts and different parts of this Bhāratavarṣa, such as Kaśmīra, Nepal, Mithilā, Bengal, Rajasthan, Gujarat, Western India, Andhradeśa, Tamilnad and Kerala. The dates of these MSS., further, range from 1020 A.D. to 1860 A.D. In fact, it is now well-nigh impossible to come across a MS. of the Rāmāyaṇa older than 1020 A.D. Some of these MSS. are accompanied by commentaries, normally representing texts which their authors considered best, but occasionally offering different readings. Some of these commentators seem to have consulted several MSS. to fix up the best Text according to them, recording readings as well as order of the Sargas, and criticising views of their predecessors. Further, some very ancient commentaries, not accompanied by text, have also been utilized in the constitution of the Text and its Critical Apparatus. I thus feel that the Rāmāyaṇa Department of the Oriental Institute of Shri Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda, has spared no pains to obtain for me MS. material needed for the preparation of a Critical Edition of the second great epic of India.

The MSS. actually used for the constitution of the text and the critical apparatus of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa are already mentioned previously in the Editorial Note.

Over and above this, the following MSS. were fully collated, but were rejected as they did not yield any useful material for Text-constitution :

1. A paper MS., transcript of a MS. in the Maithilī script, No. 14145, belonging to the Oriental Institute, Baroda. The original belonged to the Raj Library, Darbhanga, dated Śaka 1473. It was discovered that this MS. is a transcript in the Maithilī script of a MS. representing the S recension (Vulgate), and rejected on that account ( V<sub>1</sub>, collation no.).

2. A paper MS. in the Maithilī script, being a microfilm of a MS. in the University Library, Patna. Due to faulty exposure, the film has become illegible. It represents the NE version ( V<sub>3</sub> ).

3. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 12864, belonging to the Oriental Institute, Baroda, and representing the NW version ( D<sub>5</sub> ).

4. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 5600, obtained from the Scindia Oriental Institute, Ujjain, representing the Western version ( D<sub>9</sub> ).

5. A paper MS. in Devanāgarī, Jodhpur Library, dated Śaka 1708, Saṁvat 1788, and representing the Western version ( D<sub>10</sub> ).

6. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, Bundle No. 4, belonging to H. H. Maharaja Shri Gaja Singhji Sahib Bahadur of Jodhpur, now forming part of the Jodhpur Library. It was prepared by a Brahmin Gopal Khare at Kalāmūla Matha in Central Kashmir, representing the NW version ( D<sub>11</sub> ).

7. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script with the comm. of Maheśvaratīrtha ; No. 844, and belonging to the Bharat Itihasa Samshodhak Mandal, Poona, representing the S recension ( D<sub>14</sub> ).

8. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 2986, belonging to the Vishveshvarananda Vedic Research Institute, Hoshiarpur, dated Saṁvat 1808 and representing the NW version ( D<sub>16</sub> ).

9. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 2989, belonging to the Vishveshvarananda Vedic Research Institute, Hoshiarpur, dated Saṁvat 1869 and representing the NW version ( D<sub>17</sub> ).

10. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 1767, belonging to the Vishveshvarananda Vedic Research Institute, Hoshiarpur, and representing the NW version (D<sub>18</sub>).

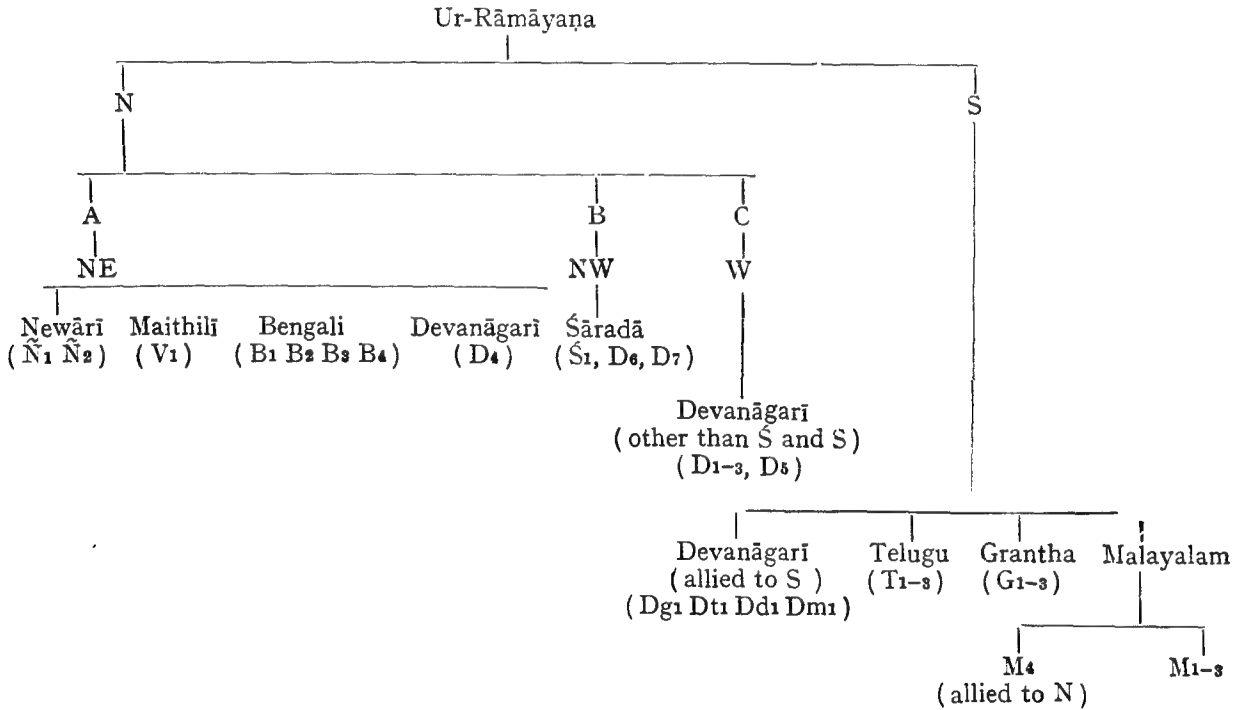

11. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 1022, belonging to the Lall Garh Palace, Bikaner, and representing the NW version (D<sub>19</sub>).

12. A paper MS. in the Devanāgarī script, No. 1020, belonging to the Maharaja of Bikaner (now deposited in the Anup Library), dated samvat 1731, and representing the NW version (D<sub>21</sub>).

13. A palm-leaf MS. in the Grantha script, No. 9869, belonging to the Government Oriental MSS. Library, Madras.

14. A palm-leaf MS. in the Malayalam script in private possession of Sankaran Nampyathan Nambudripad, Avana Parampumana, Malbar, dated Kollam 998 (i.e., A.D. 1823).

These MSS. broadly fall into two major groups, representing the two main recensions, Northern and Southern. They can be further divided into sub-groups or versions on the strength of insertions (* passages not included in the constituted text), longer or shorter, and also on account of various readings they offer. The following pedigree of the MSS. used will clearly show the relation that exists between the main recensions and the versions :

Detailed Description of the MSS.

Ś<sub>1</sub>

Baroda, Oriental Institute, No. 14061. Dated Saptarṣi Samvat 34 (C. 1860 A.D.). It was purchased for the Institute by Dr. S. N. Sharma of Srinagar. Thick unglazed paper, size 12½" × 7", Śārādā script.

The MS. is complete in seven kāṇḍas, total number of folios for Ayodhyā being 82. The folio has 17 lines to a page and about 45 to 68 letters to a line. Margins are seldom ruled; stanzas are not numbered. The first five Sargas are not numbered. Sargas from 6 to 103 are numbered, but the remaining Sargas are not. A single daṇḍa demarcates both the halves of the stanza. Colophons are daubed over with orpiment generally, but sometimes red chalk is used for the purpose. Colophons give significant Sarga names. There are marginalia, pr. m. occasionally, as also additions and corrections, most of them pr. m.. Transpositions of stanzas and their halves are occasionally found. In this connection, we may mention the episode of Kākavṛttānta which seems to be newly added. Hand-writing is fairly legible. It does not use pr̥ṣṭhamātrās, but uses parasavarṇa. The MS. seems to have been written by two scribes.

At the end of the present Kāṇḍa, Samvat 34 is mentioned, which, according to Dr. Sharma's report, is probably the Saptar̥ṣi Samvat, corresponding to A.D. 1860. This means that it is a very late exemplar. It represents the NW version.

There are a few * passages exclusive to this MS., viz., 176*, 220*, 1818* and 2396*.

Ñ<sub>1</sub>

Baroda, Oriental Institute, No. 14156, microfilm of MS. No. 934 of the Bir Library, Kathmandu, Nepal, dated Samvat 1056, which according to Pandit Baburam Acharya, Itihāsaśiromaṇi, the ex-Librarian, refers to Vikrama Samvat, corresponding to A.D. 1020. This MS. is, thus, the oldest dated MS. of Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa known to us. Palm-leaves, 21½" × 2", Newārī script.

The codex has preserved all the seven kāṇḍas. The Ayodhyākāṇḍa begins with folio 91, and ends with folio 221. It has 6 lines to a page and about 85 letters to a line. It has side-margins of 1½", and top and bottom margins ½" each, which are not ruled.

Stanzas and Sargas are not numbered, and stanza-endings are marked with a single daṇḍa. There are very few marginalia and corrections, but additions are frequent, all pr. m.. The tying-threads pass through two holes in the middle of the leaves. Dilapidated in condition. The writing is fairly correct, but owing to old age it is not clear at places. It uses pr̥ṣṭhamātrās. ञ and व, थ and ध, त and न, स and ञ, and at places even ण and ण are confounded. It has a long break, owing to missing folios, corresponding to the portion from Sarga 44 (1058*) up to 2.68.23 (1763*) of our Critical Text.

The Bāla, Ayodhyā, Aranya and Kiṣkindhā Kāṇḍas are written in one hand, and the remaining Kāṇḍas in another. The post-colophon entry made at the end of Kiṣkindhā, pr. m., states that the MS. was copied by Śrī Gopati, son of Paṇḍita Śrī Śrīkara, on the 4th Day of the dark half of the month of Āṣāḍha in the Samvat year 1076 (A.D. 1020): संवत् १०७६ आषाढ वदि ४ महाराजाधिराज पुण्याव[ण्यश्लोक सोमदेवो-

प्रभालु[व]शालिक श्रीआनन्दस्य कृते पाठ[दु]कावस्थिते पण्डितश्री श्रीकरस्यात्मज श्रीगोपतिना[ऽ]लेखीदं ॥

The MS. represents the NE version.

The exclusive * passages in the available portions of this MS. are few, viz., 497*, 508(A)* and 2278*.

Total number of Sargas is 121, the last one corresponding to Sarga 115 of the Vulgate, and all Sargas are numbered, while stanzas are not. Both the halves of the stanza are marked with single daṇḍas. Condition very old; last folio broken as a result of which the date is perhaps lost. Writing neat and legible with few errors. Wrong forms of letters common, e.g., the use of क्ष for स, स्थ for त्स्थ, क्ष for क्ष्य and क्ष्म. The MS. is written in one hand.

Baroda, in private possession (of Professor G. H. Bhatt, General Editor of this edition). Unnumbered. Written on tough and durable paper, size 12½" × 5½", in the Devanāgarī script, hand-writing of North India. This codex is complete in Seven Kāṇḍas, total number of folios of Ayodhyā being 234. It has 6 lines to a page and about 48 letters to a line. Margins ruled in black ink.

The MS. contains the commentary Bhūṣaṇa of Govindarāja up to Yuddhakāṇḍa. The text is written in three strips; the upper and lower ones contain the commentary, while the central band, with a wider margin, contains the epic text written in bolder hand than that of the commentary. Stanzas and Sargas are regularly numbered both in the text as well as in the commentary, the number of Sargas being 119 as in the Vulgate. No daṇḍas are used to mark the halves or ślokas or even the Sargas. Even in the commentary the daṇḍa is not used. Colophons are daubed over with red chalk and erasures made in yellow pigment, sometimes in white pigment and sometimes with the usual black ink. No marginalia. There are occasional additions and corrections, generally pr. m. A few cases of sup. lin. and inf. lin. correction are noticed. It is a well-preserved MS., writing is not good, and a few errors are found.

The whole MS. is copied in one hand, and the post-colophon entry made at the end of Ayodhyā states that the scribe completed the Kāṇḍa on the sixth day of the dark half of the month of Āṣāḍha in the Samvat year 1830 (A.D. 1774): संवत् आषाढमासे कृष्णपक्ष ॥

The MS. represents the S recension and the text is usually that of Govindarāja.

Jodhpur, Palace Library. Unnumbered. Written on tough paper, size 13½" × 6". Devanāgarī script.

This codex contains all the seven kāṇḍas written probably by different scribes at different periods and is thus a composite MS. For instance, the Kiṣkindhā was written in Samvat 1899, Yuddha in Śaka 1636 by Tryambaka; Uttara in Samvat 1816, Śaka 1741. The total number of folios for Ayodhyā is 333.

Yellow papers are inserted at places, perhaps to prevent damage by insects. The entire MS. is bound in one bundle, and has 6 lines to a page and about 40 letters to a line. Margins are ruled in black and daṇḍas are in red.

The MS. contains the commentary Tilaka of Nāgeśa Bhaṭṭa. The text is written in three strips: the upper and lower ones contain the commentary and the central strip with a wider margin contains the epic text in a bolder hand. Stanzas and Sargas are regularly numbered both in the text as well as in the commentary, the total number of Sargas being 119 as in the Vulgate. Double daṇḍas in red ink mark both the halves of the stanza. No marginalia, no additions, corrections, omissions or transpositions. The MS. is well preserved and writing is neat and legible. This MS. seems to belong to the group of MSS. on which the Bombay edition or the Vulgate is based. The text of the epic occasionally differs from that of the commentary. The story of Jayanta, covering one Sarga, is an episode added after Sarga 95 of the Vulgate. The Ayodhyākāṇḍa is written in one hand. Though no date is mentioned at the end of Ayodhyā, the MS. appears to be about 150 years old.

The text is written in three strips: the upper and lower ones contain the commentary, and the central one with a wider margin contains the epic text. Stanzas and Sargas are numbered in both the text and the commentary.

The number of Sargas is 119 as in the Vulgate. Double daṇḍas mark both the halves of the stanza. Colophons are daubed over with red chalk. Baroda, Oriental Institute, No. 14142. It is a photo-stat copy of the MS. No. 123 of 1884-87 of the Bombay Government Collection deposited at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. The Original MS. is dated Monday, the 8th day of the dark half of the month of Kārttika of Sāṃvat 1512, corresponding to Monday, 5th November 1455 A.D. Written on paper, size 8" × 4". Devanāgarī script of Gujarat or Rajasthan.

This MS. has only two Kāṇḍas, viz., Bāla and Ayodhyā. The total number of folios for the Ayodhyākāṇḍa proper is 262, with 12 lines to a page and about 35 letters to a line. Margins are ruled in black, and stanzas and Sargas are numbered. Colophons recording significant Sarga names read अयोध्याकाण्डे throughout, even in the portion which in the Critical Edition is included in the Bālakāṇḍa. Perhaps the present exemplar is a descendent of a MS. of the Rāmāyaṇa which divided it into three ( Ayodhyā, Araṇya and Yuddha ) or five ( Ayodhyā, Araṇya, Kiṣkindhā, Sundara and Yuddha ) Kāṇḍas. Consequently, the Sargas for Ayodhyā are from 53 to 177, the total number of the Sargas for Ayodhyā being 125. Single daṇḍas mark both the halves of the stanza. A few marginal notes, corrections and transpositions of stanzas and their halves are noticed at few places. After Sarga 175 (i.e., after vulgate 115, and Critical Edition 107 ), two new Sargas ( 176-177 ) containing the episode of Rāma-pādukābhīṣeka by Bharata, which is not found in any other MS., are added, followed by phalaśruti stanzas. ( see App. I. No. 30 ). This indicates that the Ayodhyā, according to this MS., ended here. Condition of the MS. is good, writing legible and generally correct. It is written in one hand and uses prṣṭhamātrās.

Poona, Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, No. 825 of 1875-76. Dated Sāṃvat 1829 ( A.D. 1773 ). Written on paper, size 10½" × 4¾". Devanāgarī script. Handwriting of Gujarat.

The codex is complete in seven kāṇḍas, the number of folios for Ayodhyā being 260. The MS. has 10 lines to a page and about 30 letters to a line. Margins ruled in double red lines. Stanzas and Sargas numbered, the total number of Sargas for Ayodhyā being 121 ( 121 st= 107th in the Crit. Ed. ). From Sarga 108 of the Critical Edition begins the Araṇyakāṇḍa. Colophons bearing significant Sarga names are daubed over with red chalk. Double daṇḍas mark both the halves of stanzas. A few marginal notes and corrections, sec. m. are noticed. Transpositions and repetitions of stanzas at some places. No omissions, but additional Sargas are found. Condition worn out. Writing fairly legible, but incorrect in many places. Final म् is always replaced by an anusvāra. रेफ is dropped in a number of places. The MS. is written in one hand.

The first folio of Bāla has the remark : स्वामिपुरुषोत्तमाश्रमस्येदं पुस्तकम्. The colophon at the end of Kiṣkindhā, giving date of the first four Kāṇḍas runs as follows :—

संवत् १८२९ वर्षे कार्तिक वदि ५ दिने अथेह विरमग्राममधे लेखक नागरजातीय ब्रवाडी गंगाराम उपास्मिक भवानीदास.

The kāṇḍas 6 and 7 seem to have been written by the same scribe, and therefore belong to the same period. But the entry at the end of the Sundarkāṇḍa runs as follows :—

संवत् १६५० वर्षे कार्तिकमासेऽसितपक्षे दर्शतिथौ चंद्रवारे लिखितमिदं सुंदरकांडम्.

That is to say, that the Sundarkāṇḍa was written in Sāṃvat 1650 ( A.D. 1594 ) i.e. nearly 180 years before the first four Kāṇḍas. The colophon at the end of the Yuddhakāṇḍa records that the scribe was a resident of Ahmedabad : लेखक नागरजाती अमदाबादवास्तव्यः. Viramgam is a place about 40 miles north of Ahmedabad in Gujarat. Taken all this evidence together, it appears to be a composite MS. belonging to Gujarat.

Baroda, Oriental Institute, No. 3937. Dated Samvat 1773 (A.D. 1717). Written on paper, size 9½" × 6". Devanāgarī script. Hand-writing of Gujarat.

The codex contains two Kāṇḍas, Bāla and Ayodhyā, the number of folios for Ayodhyā being 106. There is an unusual variation in the number of lines to a page which has 12 to 23 lines, and about 30 letters to a line. Margins are ruled in black ink. Stanzas are not numbered, but at the end of Ayodhyā it records the number of stanzas as 8900 (for both the Kāṇḍas?). The Sargas also are not numbered, Ayodhyā ending with Sarga 107 of the Critical Edition (= 115 of the Vulgate). Double and single daṇḍas are promiscuously used to mark the halves of stanzas. Colophons are occasionally daubed over with red pigment. Few marginalia, few corrections pr. m. Transpositions of stanzas in a few places. Dilapidated in condition. Writing legible but incorrect at places. The Kāṇḍa seems to have been written by three scribes—all hailing from Gujarat. Like D<sub>1</sub>, this MS. also writes अयोध्याकाण्डे even for Bāla, but the Sargas are not numbered as in D<sub>1</sub>. At the end of Ayodhyā, the copyist writes:—

It has a pretty large number of exclusive * passages, viz., 146*, 336(A)*, 337*, 474(A)*, 491*, 512*, 514*, 534*, 562*, 579*, 1031*, 1056*, 1576*, 1640, 1693*, 1797*, 1932*, 1943*, 1951, 1974, 1994*, 2010*, 2011*, 2039*, 2052*, 2057*, 2207*, 2285*, 2308*, and 2403 (C, D, F)*.

This feature of a number of exclusive * passages in M<sub>4</sub> indicates that it is not only a mixed codex, but most probably a representative of another version.

Testimonia

Of the Commentaries available on the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa, we have consulted six, viz., the Viveka-tilaka of Uḍāri or Uḍāli (1200 A.D.), of Rāmānuja, of Maheśvaratīrtha, of Govindarāja (1450 A.D.), Kataka or Aṃṭakataka of Katakayogindra and Tilaka of Nagesabhaṭṭa. They all comment on the S recension of the Rāmāyaṇa. The readings recorded in them and adopted by them have been cited both in support of our text and also when they do not support it.

Of epitomes, the Mahābhārata, the Purāṇas like Viṣṇu, Agni and Padma, and Kṣemendra's Rāmāyaṇakathāsāra or Rāmāyaṇamañjarī have been used. Although there is an agreement on the main story, only Agni and Padma Purāṇas and Kṣemendra's Rāmāyaṇamañjarī support the crow-incident found in the N recension. They also refer to the name of the young ascetic as Yajñadatta who was killed by Daśaratha. He was not a Brahmin boy as the Rāmāyaṇa says :

न द्विजातिरहं राजन्मा भूते मनसो व्यथा ।

शूद्रायामस्मि वैश्येन जातो जनपदाधिप ॥ Crit. Ed. 2.57.37

How in later ages, the young ascetic came to be a Rṣikumāra or a Brāhmin boy is a moot question, and I must leave the question here to be studied later. In any case, the N recension of the Rāmāyaṇa must have been before the authors of Agni and Padma Purāṇas and before Kṣemendra. The MBh. story of Rāma is very brief for the Ayodhyākāṇḍa as it covers only 33 stanzas (MBh 3.261.7-39). For text-constitution, thus, it does not help much. Similarly the Agni and Padma Purāṇas, though their narration is much more detailed, help us little for our purpose. However, Agni in 6.36 and Padma in 6.269.194-210 refer to the crow-incident. The Rāmāyaṇamañjarī of Kṣemendra devotes some 708 stanzas for Ayodhyākāṇḍa, and he imitates Vālmiki in a number of places. His narration of Rāma story is often marked by a lack of propriety (see for instance, page 52, stanzas 631-634). There is, however, no reference to the crow-incident in the S recension, and hence it is relegated to App. I (No. 26).

It will be seen from the above description of the MS. material for Ayodhyākāṇḍa that I have selected almost every available MS., which, I thought, would help me to constitute a critical text. Almost each and every MS. used has some special features of its own, and all of them, taken together, go to make up the Ur-text as far as the available stock of MSS. can take us back. The Critical Apparatus may appear somewhat loaded as a result of our selection of MSS., but it was necessary in view of the importance of the Text.

Recensions and Versions

The above material falls broadly into two major groups of recensions, Northern and Southern. Some MSS., however, particularly of the Devanāgarī group, are divided among themselves, some sharing characteristics of N and others of S recension. To indicate their features, letters N and S could be used rarely. This is the reason why the apparatus appears to be loaded. But I could not do anything to shorten it.

The Northern group of MSS. includes those in Śāradā, Nevarī or Nepālī, Bengali and Devanāgarī scripts. The Southern group covers MSS. in Devanāgarī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayalam scripts, barring, of course, M<sub>4</sub> which in some respects exhibits characteristics of a mixed version, sharing the characteristics of Newārī and Bengali versions as well as those of the S recension, having at the same time a number of exclusive insertions not found in either recension. It should be borne in mind, however, that this MS. cannot be called a mixed codex, as it has a very large number of exclusive * passages. I would rather call it a sub-version of Malayalam.

The main principle on which the constitution of our Critical Text is based is that there should be a full agreement in substance between all recensions and versions. This has resulted in rather a large number ( 1131 ) of substitute * passages in a critical text of 3170 stanza units. All these substitute * passages come from the Northern recension and its three or four versions, viz., NE, NW, W versions and M<sub>4</sub> of the Malayalam version. This has one good result, namely, that we are enabled to maintain the purity of a recension instead of creating a new recension as the late French scholar Lévi jocularly stamped the critical edition of the Mahābhārata as a Poona recension. Our constituted Text of the Rāmāyaṇa is a pure text of an Ur-Rāmāyaṇa supported by the Southern group of MSS. from which all unauthorised additions are expunged; for, we believe, and we can prove by evidence, that this group alone has kept up the archaic characteristics of the Ur-Rāmāyaṇa of Vālmiki as far as existing MSS. can take us. This, however, does not mean that the Southern recension has remained absolutely pure; it also has its own insertions, both longer and shorter, which are not known to any versions of the Northern recension. Our Critical Text, naturally, has excluded all such passages which are not supported by the Northern recension.

The two main recensions of the Vālmiki Rāmāyaṇa have a few more features that distinguish them, e.g. the beginning and the ending portions of the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa. In the N recension Ayodhyā begins with the topic of the departure of Bharata and Śatrughna to the Kekaya country of their maternal grand-father and ends with the topic of Rāma's departure from Citrakūṭa to Atri's hermitage. In the Southern recension the departure of Bharata to the Kekaya country is found towards the end of the Bālā-kāṇḍa ( Vulgate 1.77.15-19 ) in the midst of a description of the happiness of Daśaratha on the marriage and happy life of his sons, at a position which is awkward enough. This might be due to the fact that the original Rāmāyaṇa, which was divided into three Kāṇḍas, viz., Ayodhyā, Araṇya and Yuddha, had combined the contents of the present Bāla and Ayodhyā as has been evidenced by the Western version represented by our D<sub>1</sub>, and got these four stanzas transposed from the following Sarga. The topic of Rāma's visit to Atri's hermitage is, in my opinion, a part of Ayodhyā, as it is a prelude to his entry into the Daṇḍakāraṇya. I have, therefore, taken Sargas 116-119 of the Ayodhyā of the Vulgate, following the Southern tradition, to be a part of Ayodhyā. Our Ayodhyākāṇḍa, therefore, ends in the constituted text with :

इतीव तैः प्राञ्जलिमिलितपस्विभिर्द्विजैः कृतस्वस्त्ययनः परंतपः ।
वनं सभार्यैः प्रविशेश राघवः सलक्ष्मणः सूर्य इवाभ्रमण्डलम् ॥

( Crit. 2.111.20 = Vulgate 2.119.22. ) = N recension 3.3.41

which, I hope, stands to reason.

The Northern recension is further subdivided into NE, NW and W versions. In our Critical Apparatus, NE is represented by Ñ ( Nevārī, 2 MSS. ), V ( Maithilī, one MS. ), B ( Bengali, 4 MSS. ), and D ( Devanāgarī, one MS. ), NW by Ś ( Śāradā, one MS. ) and D ( Devanāgarī, 2 MSS. ); and W by D ( Devanāgarī, 4 MSS. ). The principle guiding us in determining this grouping into versions is the agreement in variants they record, as well as the locations of certain stanzas and insertions ( substitute and * passages ).

The Southern recension, on the other hand, is divided into four versions: D is represented by MSS. accompanied by commentaries ( all on S recension ), viz., Dg<sub>1</sub>, Dt<sub>1</sub>, Dd<sub>1</sub>, and Dm<sub>1</sub>; T ( Telugu, 3 MSS. ); G ( Grantha, 3 MSS. ) and M ( Malayalam, 3 MSS., M<sub>4</sub> belonging to a sub-version of M ). These MSS., barring * passages and longer passages relegated to App. I, present a remarkably uniform text, retaining all archaisms. It should always be borne in mind that it also has undergone revisions unknown to the N recension.

Before closing this topic of recensions and versions, I should like to bring to the reader's notice, a feature of my MS. material. M<sub>4</sub> is a very elusive and peculiar MS., as it sometimes agrees with N (invariably with NE version) and sometimes with S. Whether it belongs to an older version or is a mixed codex is a perplexing question. The large number of * passages exclusive to the manuscript suggests that it represents a new version, and its agreement with NE supports this point of view. When the three best representatives of Malayalam version present a uniform text, why only M<sub>4</sub>, which is also a fairly old MS., should show its contact with N, has perplexed me much. I give below an analysis of * and appendix passages in which M<sub>4</sub> agrees or does not agree with the N and S recensions.

The above analysis of * passages clearly shows that M<sub>4</sub> goes more frequently with N than with S, and further, when it goes with N, it is invariably associated with the NE version.

Of the longer passages relegated to App. I, Nos. 12, 13, 16, 17, 18, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28 and 29 are found in M<sub>4</sub> along with the MSS. of the N recension, while only in Nos. 8, 14 and 15 M<sub>4</sub> is found associating with the S recension.

There is one more MS. in the Critical Apparatus, viz. B<sub>a</sub>, belonging to the Bengali version and it has 84 exclusive * passages. It must be admitted that this is a pretty big number for a single MS., but normally it does not show any marked influence of the S recension as M<sub>4</sub> does.

Extent of the Constituted Text

The constituted Text of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa consists of 3170 stanza-units divided into 111 Sargas as against the traditional number of 4415 units and 119 Sargas recorded by Uḍāri in his Vivekatilaka. This latter number represents the bulk of Ayodhyā according to the Southern recension existing in the 12th or the 13th century. We have not discovered similar figures of stanza-units of the Northern recension, but Gorresio's edition records 127 as the number of Sargas and the Lahore edition mentions the same as 128. At the end of 2.107 (Crit. Text) most of the N MSS. record the number of Sargas as ranging from 120 to 126, while D<sub>1</sub> mentions there the number 175 (including those of Bāla). This means that the number of Sargas in the N recension ranges from 124 to 130.

The total number of * passages in the Critical Apparatus of Ayodhyā is 2418; out of these, 1131 are substitute * passages, shown as insertions only because that was the best way of recording variants of the constituted Text. They are, thus, to be left out of consideration for the volume of our text. This leaves 1287 passages as additions to or interpolations in our Text. Out of these, again, 245 * passages are peculiar or exclusive to single MSS. belonging to both the recensions, leaving 1042 * passages as real additions. Out of these, the S recension is responsible for 306 (with M<sub>4</sub>, 55 and without M<sub>4</sub>, 251). The N recension, similarly is responsible for 367 (N without M<sub>4</sub>, 137 and N with M<sub>4</sub>, 230). The remaining 349 additional * passages, occurring in the various groups of N (NW, NE and W) and S (D with comm. and T, G, M) are the group-interpolations which have been added to the Ur-text from time to time.

Further, there are 31 longer passages relegated to App. I which are found in the MSS. of both the recensions and which I considered to be not genuine and germane to the Text. The principle determining their spuriousness is that they are not found supported by all the recensions, and in some instances their location is not uniformly supported. They cover about 1931 lines or about 960 stanza-units. The longest among them contains 235 lines and the shortest 16 lines.

It will, thus, be seen that the constituted Text is the shortest one based on the agreement of all the MSS. taken as a whole. The principle followed by me in eschewing passages or lines is that there is no unanimity among MSS. about their contents and position, and their exclusion causes no break in the narration. In doing so, the traditional value of the text of the Rāmāyaṇa as a sacred one cannot weigh as an overwhelming factor. If the reader dispassionately reads the constituted Text of Ayodhyā, he will, I feel confident, find it a true representative of the Ādikāvya.

Appendix Passages

There are in all 31 passages, long and short, relegated to App. I to the constituted Text. Many of them are found in a few MSS. Passage No. 9 is, however, found in a very large number of MSS., and as such, deserves a special consideration. It is a long passage having 235 lines, and a major portion of it belongs to the S recension, only a few lines occurring in the N recension. As the contents of our constituted Text are covered by the lines in N, they could have been shown as subst. lines, but they are relegated to App. I, to keep their continuity.

Passage No. 26 in App. I. is peculiar in some respects and deserves a detailed consideration. It is found in all the MSS. of the N recension (N<sub>1</sub> missing for a major portion of it), and in Dt<sub>1</sub> and M<sub>4</sub> of the S recension. There is, however, no trace of it in any of the commentaries on the S recension from Uḍāri down to Maheśvaratīrtha and also in the bare text of 9 MSS. (T G M<sub>1-3</sub>). Naturally, it had to be relegated to App. I.

This passage consists of two parts, lines 1-66 forming the first which may be somewhat treated as a subst. passage for Sargas 88-89 of Ayodhyā and lines 67-122 forming the second. The antiquity of this passage is beyond question, the following stanza :

त्वदर्थमिव विन्यस्तः शिलापट्टोऽयमग्रतः ।

अस्य पार्श्वे तरुः पुष्पैः प्रवृष्ट इव केसरैः ॥ (App. I, No. 26, lines 11-12)

with a variant for the second line

being immortalised by Bhavabhūti, a northerner. In my opinion, the passage was first introduced in the N recension, and was blindly copied by Dt<sub>1</sub> and M<sub>4</sub>. The lines 31-52 describe a highly poetic and romantic situation, the elimination of which from the constituted Text might displease lovers of a fine poetic composition. The passage is no doubt charming and old enough as it is referred to by Bhavabhūti (8th century) and Kṣemendra (11th century); but no trace of it is to be found in the purest form of the S recension represented in our Critical Apparatus by as many as 9 MSS. (T G M<sub>1-3</sub>) which, in Sargas 88 and 89, represent the contents of this part. For the hero and the heroine of the Rāmāyaṇa, I, however, consider this passage as out of taste in the present context; for, they could not indulge in such amorous sport when their departure from Ayodhyā, Bharata's visit etc., were still fresh in their mind, and the suggestion of Śrṅgāra at this juncture is hardly justifiable. I was, therefore, most reluctantly forced to eschew it from the constituted Text.

The second part of this passage narrates the crow-episode. It is found also in the Padma Purāṇa and Kṣemendra's Rāmāyaṇamañjarī and is therefore fairly old. To me it appears to be an episode first introduced by a Kīrtanakāra bent on amusing his audience, and offering at the same time an explanation why a crow sees with one eye only. The description of the harrassment of Sītā by the crow is highly inappropriate in the Ādikāvya, and does no credit to Sītā or to Rāma who was for a while silently looking at the harrassment. The use of a reed sanctified by mantras, as described in

सोऽभिमन्य शरैपीकामिपीकास्त्रेण वीर्यवान् ।

कार्कं तमभिसंधाय ससर्जं पुरुषर्षभः ॥ (App. I., No. 26, lines 89-90)

against a small bird for such a trifling purpose surely looks strange. I had, therefore, no alternative before me but to reject the passage from the constituted Text.

The Rāma Story in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa

There is often a list of Vṛttāntas or events at the end of each parvan of the Mahābhārata MSS.

We do not find any such light in the case of the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa, probably-because the story here, barring of course the Uttarakāṇḍa, is well-knit. In Kṣemendra's Rāmāyaṇamañjarī, we get some indication of the contents of the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa. If I add one or two titles to Kṣemendra's list, it will run as follows :—

I [भरतस्य केकयगमनम्]; 2 [दशरथस्य रामयौवराज्याभिषेकाभिलाषः]; 3 अभिषेकारम्भः; 4 मन्थरावाक्यम्; 5 कैकेयीवरयाचनम्; 6 रामप्रवासनम्; 7 [गङ्गातरणम्]; 8 यज्ञदत्ततापसवधवृत्तान्तः; 9 दशरथविपत्तिः; 10 भरतप्रत्यागमनम्; 11 दशरथसंस्कारः; 12 [भरतेन राज्यप्रत्याख्यानम्]; 13 भरतयात्रा; 14 [काकाशिक्षातनम्]; 15 लक्ष्मणकोपः; 16 कच्चिकम्; 17 [रामेण राज्यप्रत्याख्यानम्]; 18 [भरतप्रायोपवेशनम्]; 19 रामेण भरताय पादुकाप्रदानम्; 20 भरतव्रतग्रहणम्; 21 [चित्रकूटाश्रमत्यागः]; 22 [अन्याश्रमगमनम्] and 23 [दण्डकारण्यप्रवेशः].

Based upon the above topics, the contents of the Rāma story in the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa are as follows :—

After the wedding of his four sons, Daśaratha returns to Ayodhyā. For a while, all his sons live with their wives in happiness, in Ayodhyā. At the invitation of their maternal grandfather, Bharata and Śatrughna go to see him and spend some time there, utilizing this vacation to learn some useful arts which Kṣatriya princes are expected to acquire. In the meanwhile, a thought occurs to Daśaratha that he should crown his son Rāma, the beloved of all, as his heir-apparent. The idea is hailed by ministers and eminent people in the country. The day is fixed and the news is received with joy by all citizens of Ayodhyā. At this juncture, an old maid of Kaikeyī poisons the ears of her mistress, telling her that Rāma's coronation would ruin for ever Bharata's chances of becoming a king. She suggests to Kaikeyī that she should press Daśaratha to grant her the two boons promised by him long ago, and kept in reserve by her. One of them should be, she further tells her, that Bharata should be crowned instead of Rāma, and the other, that Rāma should stay in the Daṇḍakāraṇya for fourteen years. Kaikeyī, accordingly, asks Daśaratha to grant her the boons. Rāma is called in and informed of the situation. He immediately agrees to abide by the word of honour of his father, and prepares to renounce the kingdom and spend fourteen years in the forest, to the great shock to his mother, Lakṣmaṇa and Sītā. Sītā persuades Rāma to take her to the forest, and Lakṣmaṇa also does the same. The trio, accordingly, takes leave of all and leaves Ayodhyā. The party crosses the Gaṅgā with the help of Guha, and proceeds towards Prayāga. Daśaratha, unable to bear his separation from Rāma, dies in the meanwhile. Before death, he narrates to Kausalyā, how in his young days he hit unawares an ascetic with an arrow and how his old blind parents cursed Daśaratha that he also would die as a result of separation from his son.

Keeping the dead body of Daśaratha embalmed, Vasiṣṭha and others send messengers to the Kekaya country to bring Bharata back to Ayodhyā without informing him of Daśaratha's death and the departure of Rāma in exile. On arrival Bharata goes straight to see Daśaratha when the news of his death is first broken to him. He then inquires about Rāma when Kaikeyī herself tells him that the throne is his and his elder brother has left for the forest in order to fulfil his father's word. Learning that Kaikeyī is responsible for the catastrophe, he reproaches his mother, and declares that he cannot accept the throne under those circumstances. After performing the funeral rites of his father, he immediately starts with his mothers and retinue on his mission to bring Rāma back and make him accept the kingdom of Ayodhyā. He visits Guha and then the hermitage of the sage Bharadvāja in Prayāga, where he learns from him that Rāma has just proceeded towards Citrakūṭa. He then moves in that direction, meets Rāma, tells him that Daśaratha is dead and that Rāma should return to Ayodhyā to rule. Rāma tells him plainly that he must keep the promise he made to his father, and hence he cannot return to Ayodhyā for fourteen years. Bharata, to make Rāma return, starts preparations for a Prāyopaveśana, fasting to death till the objective is achieved. Rāma dissuades him from his resolve, agrees to return to Ayodhyā after 14 years, and gives to Bharata his gold-studded sandals. Bharata accepts them, returns to Nandigrāma near Ayodhyā, and reigns there in the name of Rāma till his return.

After Bharata's departure, Rāma, not finding his stay at Citrakūṭa very congenial, decides to leave the place and move further south. He meets the sage Atri. His wife Anasūyā receives Sītā with kind favours, and Rāma then enters the Daṇḍakāraṇya.

This, in brief, is the story of Rāma as found in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, and is uninformedly supported by all recensions and versions.

Episodes

There is only one episode in the constituted Text that deserves notice. It occurs in 2.57, and relates to the death of a young ascetic (not a Brahmin) at the hands of Daśaratha. This young ascetic was the only child of his blind parents, and had gone, rather early in the morning, to the river Sarayū to fetch water for his thirsty parents. Daśaratha, quite young and unmarried at this time, had gone to the same spot ahunting, and was desirous of testing his skill in hitting game at its mere sound. The young ascetic was filling his earthen pitcher with water, an act which produced the sound of an elephant. Daśaratha hit at it, and on hearing a cry of distress of a human being, rushed to the spot to find his mistake. The young ascetic narrated the story of his aged and blind parents, requested Daśaratha to take out the arrow from his body and died soon after. Daśaratha, with a heavy heart, approached the parents of the ascetic with the water-jar, narrated to them how, through mistake, he had caused the death of their only son, and was cursed by the father to the effect that Daśaratha also would meet his death on separation from his dear son.

The story in the episode is simple enough, but it appears that it developed in subsequent ages with a number of additions. The Rāmāyaṇa nowhere gives the name of the young ascetic, but the Agni Purāṇa and Kṣemendra name him Yajñadatta. The popular mythology calls the young ascetic as Śravaṇa or Śrāvaṇa. Further, the Rāmāyaṇa clearly states that this incident took place when Daśaratha was young and unmarried. :

देव्यनूढा त्वमभवो युवराजो भवाम्यहम् । Crit. Ed. 2.57.10

Kālidāsa, in his Raghuvamśa IX narrates the same, does not name the young ascetic, but states in st. 17 that Daśaratha was married to the princesses of Magadha, Kosala and Kekaya, and in sts. 48-49 that he went ahunting with his wives. Further, in st. 80, Daśaratha is said not to have seen the face of a child so far, and so received the curse of the ascetic's parents as an anugraha or favour :

ज्ञापोऽप्यदृष्टतनयाननपद्मशोभे

सानुग्रहो भगवता मयि पानितोऽयम् । (Raghu. IX. 80)

All this indicates that Daśaratha was, at the time of this incident, not only married but was much advanced in age. Is it deliberately done by the poet to heighten the poetic value of the incident, or has the poet drawn on other sources ? It is a moot point.

The crow-episode is found only in the N recension as detailed above.

Time Data in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa

There is an interesting passage in Nāgeśa's Tilaka commentary (A.D. 1700-1750) regarding the time from Rāma's departure from Ayodhyā till his entry into the Daṇḍakāraṇya. It runs as follows :

अत्रेदं बोध्यम्-चैत्रशुक्लदशम्यां पुष्ये रामप्रस्थानम् । ततः पूर्णिमायामर्धरात्रे दशरथमरणम् । ततः पक्षेण भरतागमनमयोध्यायाम् । तत और्ध्वदहिकेन पक्षो गतः । एवं वैशाखे गते ज्येष्ठे भरतस्य चित्रकूटं प्रति प्रस्थानम् । अग्रे वर्षाकाले संनिहिते सति कार्तिक्यन्तं चित्रकूटे वासो रामस्य । तदनन्तरं तापसोत्सुक्यलक्षणम्, न तु भरतनिवृत्त्यनन्तरमेव ।

This is a general calculation of the time taken up by the events from Rāma's departure to his entry into the Daṇḍakāraṇya, and is acceptable. There is one indication in the body of our constituted Text regarding time taken up by Bharata's return journey from Kekaya to Ayodhyā, with seven nights' halt on the way (सप्तरात्रोषितः पथि- 2.65.14). The messengers sent to the Kekaya country might have taken a day or two less. We may, therefore, accept Nāgeśa's calculation to be fairly correct.

Geographical Data in the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa

On the death of Daśaratha, Vasiṣṭha and others sent messengers to bring Bharata and Śatrughna back from Girivraja or Rājagṛha, the capital of the Kekaya country (not to be confounded with the old capital of the Magadha). These messengers had definite instructions not to reveal to Bharata the news of the death of Daśaratha or of Rāma's departure from Ayodhya to the forest. They were asked to go as fast as they could, and might have selected short-cuts on the route. From Ayodhyā they proceeded west-ward, crossed the Gaṅgā at Hastinapur, went to Pāñcāla through the Kurujāṅgala, crossed the river Śaradaṇḍā, reached Kuliṅgāpurī, Bāhlika country, Sudāma mountain, Viṣṇupāda, river Vipāśā and Sālmālī and thereafter Girivraja, the capital of Kekaya. On their return journey, they seem to have travelled rather leisurely, and taken a more comfortable route. From Rājagṛha (another name of Girivraja) they proceeded east-ward, crossed rivers Hrādinī, Dūrapārā and Śatadrū at Eladhāna, covered the region Aparaparpaṭa, passed through a swift river, Śilā ākurvatī, passed by Śalyakartana, Mahāśaila and Caitraratha forest. They then crossed the river Yamunā, visited Jambūprastha, village Varūtha, the garden of the town Ujjihānā, and before reaching the town Lauhitya, crossed Uttānakā, reached Hasti-prsthaka, passed Kuṭikā and Kapīvatī, Sthānumatī at Ekasāla; and after crossing Gomatī at Vinata and passing through Kaliṅganagara (Gorakhpur) and the Sāla forest, reached Ayodhyā.

I have given above the names of rivers, towns, mountains, forests and gardens as they are mentioned in the constituted Text, without making any attempt to identify them. The difficulties in my way are many, and Bhavabhūti anticipated them when he says :

पुरा यत्र स्रोतः पुलिनमधुना तत्र सरितां
निवेशः शैलानां तदिदमिति बुद्धिं द्रढयति ।

I might add that in modern times even hills have been rendered flat, and so, the difficulties in identifying places have now been increased hundredfold.

There is a mention in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa of Rāma's journey southwards from Ayodhyā in which Śṛṅgaverapura, Bhardvāja's hermitage (at Prayāga), Citrakūṭa hill and a small river near it, Mandākinī (not to be confounded with Gaṅgā) are mentioned. I keep in reserve the idea of supplying a suitable map of India, on which would be marked places that are mentioned in the Rāmāyaṇa; for, after all, we must be sure of our authorities on which location and identification of place-names are to be based.

Emendations

There are only seven cases of emendations in the Ayodhyākāṇḍa. Most of them are obvious as they relate to omissions of तु or हि introduced to avoid hiatus, as in अभीता for ह्यभीता in 2.11.2; त्वार्यो *अयोध्यां for त्वार्यो ह्ययोध्यां in 2.82.25; and मम पित्रा *अहं दत्ता for त्वहं दत्ता in 2.110.50. It should be noted that with Vālmiki the use of तु and हि is very frequent and without their usual sense of contrast or emphasis, and so it has to be regarded as his stylistic peculiarity. In the above instances also the introduction of तु or हि can be explained away as such; but in the first case, our emendation is supported by MSS. containing commentaries. In the second and third cases, the text introduces हि and तु without any reason except that of avoiding hiatus. In the case of दुष्प्रेक्ष्ये *अशोभेतां for दुष्प्रेक्ष्ये त्वशोभेतां in 2.30.2, there is no need to introduce तु, as दुष्प्रेक्ष्ये is neuter dual ending in ए and hence a प्रगुह्य. The MSS. of the S recension intentionally changed here the text into प्रेक्ष्याभ्यामशोभेतां, T<sub>3</sub> alone keeping दुष्प्रेक्ष्ये of the N recension and adding तु under the impression that there was a case of hiatus. I was thus compelled to restore the reading of the N recension, which I consider to be the genuine S reading.

There are three more cases of emendations which require some explanation. The first of these is स* निदेशे पितुस्तिष्ठ in 2.16.24 where S reads संनिदेशे or तन्निदेशे and Ś<sub>1</sub> D<sub>1-7</sub> read संनिदेशः पितुस्तेऽयं. I have emended here स* for सं- and I construe it as स(त्वं) पितुर्निदेशे तिष्ठ for the reason that prefix सं to निदेशे is not usual or necessary for stylistic reasons. In 2.23.30, I have emended the text found in the MSS., भरत-शत्रुघ्नौ into *लक्ष्मणशत्रुघ्नौ, as the case of Lakṣmaṇa accompanying Rāma was not, at this stage, even a probability. How Sītā should behave towards Bharata has been referred to in st. 23 above and st. 31 below, while Lakṣmaṇa is not mentioned anywhere. This is the reason for the emendation which is based on the context. The last case of emendation दुःखं विसृजन्त्य*सं occurs in 2.39.13. The MSS. of the S recension are divided between अश्रु and आसं, commentators reading अश्रु and the MSS. T G M1-3 reading आसं which word is not found in lexicons.

Use of Wavy Lines

The late Dr. V. S. Sukthankar, the first General Editor of the Critical Edition of the Mahābhārata, introduced the use of wavy lines below the accepted text to indicate that the text adopted was less than certain, i.e., it was not uniformly supported by both the N and S recensions. The wavy line was also used when these recensions differed in wording though agreed in substance. Such a use of wavy lines for substitute passages or for the text which is less than certain is not found practicable in the case of the Rāmāyaṇa. In the first place, it is our experience that the S recension alone has rather preserved the archaic form of the text than the N recension. The S recension is, therefore, adopted for our principal printed Text. Further, in the Text of 3170 stanzas of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, the number of substitute passages is 1131, which would mean that almost every third stanza should be marked with wavy lines. Such a thing would look very awkward in print as the text in the Virāṭaparvan of the Mahābhārata is, and hence Sukthankar's scheme of wavy lines could not be adopted for our text. We have, however, used the wavy line rarely, when the MSS. of the S recension are found divided among themselves, and the editor could not choose a particular reading of the S MSS. as final.

Metres in the Ayodhyā Kāṇḍa

The main body of the text of the Rāmāyaṇa as Ādikāvya is in the anuṣṭubh metre. According to Sāhityadarpaṇa of Viśvanātha, a Kāvya should be composed in one main metre with a change at the end :

एकवृत्तमयैः पद्यैरवसानेऽन्यवृत्तकैः ।
नातिस्वल्पा नातिदीर्घाः सर्गा अष्टाधिका इह ।
नानावृत्तमयः कापि सर्गः कश्चन दृश्यते । VI. 320-21

Viśvanātha in the above lines has recorded only a general principle अवसानेऽन्यवृत्तकैः, which he found to be in practice. If we examine the Sargas in the Ayodhyā kāṇḍa to see how far Vālmīki has followed the above principle, we see that as many as 16 Sargas out of 111 of the constituted Text have not got any change in metre at the end ; but in some cases, e.g., in Sargas 26, 40, 41, 90, 91, 100, 105, 106, 107 and 109 the redactors or interpolaters of both the recensions are seen active to have a stanza or two in a different metre or to make the Sarga run on into the next.

Of the metres in the closing stanzas of a Sarga, Varṇasāstha occurs some sixty times, Upendravajrā, Upajāti, Praharṣinī and Vaitāliya figuring next in frequency. With reference to two stanzas at the end of Sarga 108, the commentator Govindarāja states : वृत्तं तु श्लोकद्वयस्य चिन्त्यम्. My friend, Professor H. D. VELANKAR, tells me that the metre of stanza 2.108.25 is Asambādhā ( first line slightly defective ), and of 2.108.26 a mixture of Triṣṭubh and Jagatī. There is one more instance of a defective line of Varṇasāstha which I have noticed at the end of Sarga 2.69.

Before conclusion, I should like to gratefully record my sincere thanks to those persons who entrusted this work to me and who actively helped me in my task from beginning to end. In fact, I feel very much overwhelmed by their kindness when on the conclusion of the work I find how my role has been insignificant compared with an enormous quantity of quality labour these persons bestowed upon the production of this volume of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa. It is obviously difficult for me to mention all names, but I am all along conscious of their kind help to me.

I should like to record, in the first place, my grateful thanks to Dr. (Shrimati) Hansaben Mehta, the then Vice-Chancellor of the Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda, who, without any acquaintance, accepted my name first for the membership of the Editorial Board and then for the editorship of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa on the recommendation of my friend, Professor Govindalal H. Bhatt, the General

Editor of this Critical Edition of Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa. Professor Bhatt has also been equally kind to me from beginning to end, and advised me in all my difficulties in the editorial task. My heartfelt thanks go to him. For the preparation of my text, I had to spend weeks in Baroda when I was deeply impressed by his organising ability in the selection of the staff for the collection of MSS. and collation work. He was ably assisted by Shri M. R. Nambiar, the Assistant Editor, and also by Shri Haribhau Tryambak Desai and Shri B. N. Bhatt in all his activities—the selection of MSS., collation and supervision, preparation of Critical Apparatus and its checking, and finally proof-correction. Obviously, the Critical Edition of a text like the Rāmāyaṇa is not the work of an individual, but of a team, and the successful completion of it depends upon the staff, prepared to give its best to the General Editor. It is only loyalty of this type which enables the editor to give a trustworthy text. This preliminary task is both hard and stupendous. I consider myself lucky in having a staff which rendered my work easy and light. If, therefore, there is any credit in my performance, 90% of it goes to the members of the staff. I am aware of my limitations. I, therefore, like to record my grateful thanks to them individually and collectively. Lastly, the artists and the staff of the University Press have spared no pains to make the paintings and the printing of this volume excellent in their usual way, and I must not miss to record my best thanks to them also.
